Thematic Arena 3, TA3-190, Opportunity District, Expo City, Dubai

6 DECEMBER, 2023 | 17:00 PM – 18:30 PM

In an era defined by the urgent challenges of climate change, effective communication is essential for successful mitigation and adaptation efforts. Moreover, recognizing the pivotal role of youth in shaping our future, their active involvement becomes indispensable. The International Solar Alliance (ISA) has been at the forefront of communicating solar and climate initiatives, emphasizing policy measures, actionable insights, and fostering knowledge exchange.

To broaden the impact and reach of solar and climate-related discourse, a focused approach involving youth is paramount. This entails embedding sustainable lifestyles, enhancing community awareness, integrating climate change into education, and fostering youth-led initiatives for constructive advocacy.

This panel discussion aims to bring together a diverse group of young experts to explore innovative strategies for communicating complex climate science and solar solutions to diverse audiences. The session will delve into engaging youth effectively through storytelling, visual aids, and various platforms. Furthermore, it will provide a platform for youth voices to contribute to discussions on the COP 28 tripling agenda, regulatory frameworks, business models, investor confidence, and the creation of a skilled workforce for the renewable technology sector.

Join us in this exploration of how empowering today's youth can pave the way for a sustainable and informed future in the realms of climate change and solar advocacy.
